Legislature Halts Physical Expansion

by Judy Bryan
The pounding gavel signaling the close of the Ohio Legislature's 104th General Assembly dealt the final crushing blow to Kent State's waning hopes for money for capital improvements.

Kent State will receive no money for classroom buildings or other improvements for the next two years. President George A. Bowman had previously pointed out it would take between $5 and $6 million just to catch up with present needs. He estimated that Kent State university should have $25 million over the next decade for classrooms, office and laboratory space. Now present facilities, including four World War II barracks, must suffice for two more years.

With Kent State's present 9,651 full-time students on campus, competition for some courses is keen and many are closed out of required classes time after time. More classes cannot be scheduled because of lack of space.

With the avalanche of would-be students coming in the immediate years ahead, it's difficult to imagine how a body of educated men could decide we do not need immediate classroom space and other capital improvements.

President Bowman and representatives of other state universities caught in the same pinch were available to the various legislative committees and eager to make the needs of their institutions known, but few legislators were willing to listen. When the Senate Finance Committee held its hearing on university budgets, the only questions asked were petty queries such as how much is being spent for postage and telephone service.

Indisputable statistics show that Ohio ranks a poor 40th among the states in the per capita amount of public money it spends on higher education. Compare this with the fact that Ohio ranks 11th among the states in per capita income.

But we can't honestly blame our loss entirely on the legislature. Shouldn't we have been explaining our needs all along without waiting to be asked or until a crisis arose? Not just to the legislature but to the public, the people of Ohio, who will ultimately be taxed for their son's and daughter's educational needs. The university must provide part of the leadership in order to raise public support to meet its needs.

Let's hope the day is soon approaching when we will be receiving our fair share of these talked about "state funds" to keep Kent and the other state universities of Ohio growing educationally in the increasingly vital years ahead.
Enrollment Figures Continue to Climb

A parking space is a rare thing to find after professors and commuters descend on campus.

The connecting hall between Kent and Merrill presents an hourly bottleneck as too many students rush through too little space.

One class was so overcrowded that students had to buy their own campstools to assure themselves of a seat.

Dedicated to Kent

by Adda Bogun

In 1944 a new president and his wife moved into a country home near the Kent State university campus. Cows from the pasture next door occasionally wandered through the back yard. The old orchard on the other side of the house was a better place for the dog to run and play than for picking good apples.

Mr. and Mrs. George A. Bowman still live in the same white frame “country” home, but the “country” has become a campus. A women’s dormitory, Terrace Hall, stands where the orchard once bloomed, and the classrooms and auditoriums of the Speech and Music Center have taken over the pasture.

In eighteen years of planning, working and making decisions, President Bowman has watched Kent State undergo tremendous growth in academic prestige, public interest, and physical facilities of laboratories, classrooms, offices and residence halls.

As they relax, the Bowmans discuss an anecdote concerning student life.

“Those first years,” Mrs. Bowman recalls, “my husband worked very hard to achieve the greatest possible development of the human resources coming to the campus. He literally ‘lived’ Kent State twenty-four hours a day.”

Students, alumni, faculty and administrative personnel have worked closely with Mr. Bowman to bring about Kent State’s great physical growth. Building to keep pace with the expanding enrollment has been very difficult. But Mr. Bowman has felt that there were two tasks more important to be accomplished before the physical growth could realize its potential.

First, reports Mrs. Bowman, he has insisted on assembling a faculty and administration of superior ability, character and learning. Secondly, he has worked to instill a feeling of pride in, and loyalty to, Kent State university on behalf of students, alumni, faculty and administrative personnel. He feels that Kent State’s growth can have real meaning only with an outstanding faculty with pride in its work of teaching.

No rest for the President

In one of those rare moments when they can be alone together, the Bowmans have some fun producing one of their own special recipes.

He is busy again with the gardening that he enjoys so thoroughly and this time he is among the roses that rank as his favorite.

As one of his many official duties, the President presents a citation to retiring Prof. Marion VanCampen.
A twinkle appears in President Bowman's eyes as one of the floats catches his fancy while he is viewing the parade on a chilly and damp Campus Day.

After meeting some five hundred freshmen, the President, still full of pep, brings a smile to the face of a new coed as he introduces her to his wife.

Even in his study at home the President soon turns to reflecting upon his many hopes and plans for the university which is a constant source of concern to him.
Bowman guides academic personnel

President Bowman's secretarial staff is composed of (l-r) Alice Makinson, Geneva Wood and Ethelyn Fitzsimmons.

Robert J. White, Vice President for Academic Affairs, works closely with President Bowman in university supervision.

Dean of Students, Glen T. Nygreen, includes in his duties coordinating campus organizations and functions.

Dean of Women's Office, l-r: Margaret J. Forsythe, Dean of Women; E. Muriel Shennan, Rena M. Sanders and Anna Mae Riggle, assistant deans, are guidance personnel for KSU's women students.
It was in July, 1944, that Mr. Bowman became the new president of Kent State University. He was noted for his refusal to make snap judgments or hastily-considered decisions. His quiet sense of humor helped him to work well with others, who soon realized that although he refused to take himself too seriously, there is one thing he did take very seriously—that is Kent State University and its role as an important educational institution.

The new president had received his bachelor's degree from Adelbert College of Western Reserve University, and his master's degree from Columbia University. He had also studied at Ohio University, Ohio State University, and University of Chicago. He has been awarded the Doctor of Laws degree by Bowling Green State University in 1945. In 1960, Western Reserve University, Youngstown University and the University of Akron awarded Mr. Bowman additional degrees for his work in the field of education.

Mrs. Bowman has both helped with and shared in her husband's work. "I try not to take a great part in university activities," she says in her pleasant, brisk way. "Instead, I try to devote my time to creating an atmosphere which is restful and enjoyable for my husband when he comes home after his usual long, busy day."

As an executive, the president's daily schedule is filled with decision-making meetings with administrators, public officials, department heads, deans, committee chairmen, students, faculty members, and alumni. It is his responsibility to advise, confer, debate, guide and decide. He must also find time to attend banquets, luncheons, teas, university programs and public events. He is often a guest speaker, and likes to bring Kent State to the attention of professional organizations and social groups.

"My husband especially enjoys the activities organized and directed by students," Mrs. Bowman points out. "Watching students at work has always been rewarding to him."

But his busy schedule leaves him little time to associate with the students. Because of this, President Bowman prizes each opportunity to talk with student representatives.

"The press conferences with Stater reporters give him an opportunity he especially values to meet and talk with members of the student body. He likes the feeling of being in close contact with the students and their interests," Mrs. Bowman adds.

Mrs. Bowman does spend considerable time for the university. She is often called upon to be hostess for faculty, administrators and their wives. Even though she doesn't work directly with the students she tries to keep in contact with them. There are always several issues of the Stater lying on her coffee table, and the current edition of the Chestnut Burr is close at hand. When the president is at home, they always seem to end up talking about the students, what they are thinking and what they are doing.

"Both the president and I enjoy watching the students mature. We first meet our young men and women at the freshman reception, and we find it very satisfying to see them become prominent academically, socially, and professionally."

Mr. Bowman often talks fondly of meeting Kent State graduates who are "counting in the world." His face radiates with happiness when he returns to the university with news of a graduate in a key position in any one of many fields of endeavor from business management to educational administration.

The president has little spare time, but when he does have a few minutes to himself, he likes to watch other things besides Kent State grow. He is an avid gardener of vegetables and flowers. He especially enjoys growing roses.

When the president has a chance for a short vacation, there is nothing he would rather do than go fishing. He likes to sit hour after hour, quietly waiting for "that fish" to bite. He claims this to be one of the few ways he can completely relax, but even then his thoughts are probably not far from the trials, problems, rewards and happiness that are all part of his experiences at Kent State University. He has given so much of himself to Kent, and he has been repaid many times by the greatest advances the university and its alumni have made during his term of office.

Working from his office on the Atrium balcony is Dean Charles G. Wilber, left, who received his Ph.D. degree from John Hopkins university. He became Dean of the Graduate School in 1961.

Eric N. Rackham, center, who has served as Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences for 10 years, received his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from the University of Michigan.

Also in an office above the Atrium is Dean Clayton M. Schindler, second from left, who received his Ph.D. from Ohio State University in 1950. He was appointed Dean of the College of Education in 1959.

Dean of the College of Fine and Professional Arts is John J. Kamerick, second from right. He was selected to head the new college in 1959. He received his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from Iowa State.

"Could you move in a little closer, Dean Hill?" requested the young man crawling down the ladder.

The photographer stepped onto a chair and bent first one way and then the other as he squinted into the viewfinder.

"Okay, let's try one that way," he said and climbed back up the ladder again.

As changes were made and more pictures were snapped, the deans of the five KSU colleges were soon deeply engrossed in "shop talk."

Charles G. Wilber, Dean of the Graduate School started it all off when he innocently said, "As the newest dean at Kent, I'm curious about what the other colleges are doing and how they came into being."

by Adda Bogun
Proudly, Clayton M. Schindler, Dean of the College of Education, leaned forward to declare, "Well, of course, our college is the oldest here, for Kent State university started out in 1911 as Kent State Normal School for the training of teachers."

Managing to get a word in edgewise, the cameraman asked, "Could you sit back in your seat a little more, Dean Schindler?"

"Oh yes, of course," replied the Dean.

"You didn't offer a four-year degree then, did you?" inquired Dean Wilber.

"Oh no, the emphasis was on a two-year diploma for elementary teachers. Then in 1915, the Board of Trustees changed the name to Kent State Normal College, and with the change came the conferring of the Bachelor of Science degree upon ten candidates that June."

Eric N. Rackham, Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, broke in, "Yes, and from that time on there was pressure for a liberal arts college at Kent State, but bills for the establishment of such a college were defeated due to opposition of other Ohio schools."

"Uh-uh. Huh-uh," was all the photographer could get in.

"We had our beginning in 1929 when Kent offered its first liberal arts course for those not planning to teach," continued Dean Rackham. "It seems that Kent managed to read the right to do this into the Emmons-Hanna Bill, which was passed by the state legislature in 1929. As you know, this bill legalized many things that Kent had been doing for years. It provided for our being called a university, authorized granting a Bachelor of Science degree in Education, and recommended conferring honorary degrees. The latter, Kent had already done in 1924."

"A-Hem," came the comment of the outsider as he attempted to get the attention of these engrossed "knights of the round table."

At this point Dean Robert E. Hill intervened to remind all, that with the growing trend in the 1920's for vocational training in high school, there had been a department of commercial education begun in 1924.

"Here lies the beginnings of the College of Business Administration," Dean Hill said.

Finally, the photographer blurted out, "Would you gentlemen please move over to those chairs? The men from Pershing Rifles are waiting to have their group shot taken."

"Oh, certainly," replied the deans as they continued their conversation in one corner of the room.

Then John J. Kamerick, Dean of the College of Fine and Professional Arts said, "Wasn't it in 1932 that the Deans for the College of Liberal Arts and the College of Education were chosen? They were the first academic deans since 1917 when there had been a dean of faculty."

"Definitely," agreed Dean Schindler, "and by 1932 we had progressed so well that Kent State College was taken into full membership by the Ohio College Association in 1932 and the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools in 1933."

Dean Hill's face lit up with a grin as he began on his favorite subject, the College of Business Administration. "You know it was right after that in 1934 that the College of Business Administration got on its feet. From 1924 on, it had concentrated mainly on preparing young men and women to teach commercial subjects on the high school level; but in time, there grew to be a need for the preparation of people to go out into the various fields of business. It was necessary to teach more than teaching."

Deans confer with department heads, coordinate college policy

“And then in 1959 the College of Fine and Professional Arts, the baby of the university family, came into being because of the large enrollment in the College of Arts and Sciences,” said Dean Kamerick. “The degrees offered by our college are for fields ranging from architecture to speech and hearing therapy.”

“Well, of course,” said Dean Hill, “we hope to produce graduates with a professional background in business and the ability to deal with people.”

“Oh ... ah ... h ...”

“To receive a degree from the graduate school, a student must possess the ability to do intensified study. This is emphasized even more in the doctoral program which went into effect in the fall of 1961,” said Dean Wilber.

“In the College of Education,” added Dean Schindler, “we hope that the students will obtain a general education as well as a pleasing personality, sound moral judgment, and an interest in people.”

The lights flickered off and on.

“Oh ... Excuse me ...”

Dean Rackham said, “In the College of Arts and Sciences, we stress a liberal education while encouraging students to develop their potentials and capabilities as persons and members of society.”

Off went the lights.

“Excuse me, gentlemen,” came the voice of the photographer. “I simply must lock up for the night. Would you like me to come and let you out in the morning?”
Wherever people get together, there are groups formed—mostly through similar interests, similar ideals and similar goals.

Thus, any campus community becomes the ideal situation for organization.

Kent State University is no exception. On its campus can be found something for every interest and preference. Want to learn to shoot a rifle, bake a cake or dance? Interested in politics or learning more about your faith or future profession? Or just want to have a good time with people who share similar goals? KSU offers a club specializing in each of these fields.

Since such a great number and variety of organizations exists here, most students belong to at least one of them. Many prefer the professional groups, such as the American Chemical Society, the Industrial Arts Club, the education associations and many others. These groups are usually made up of majors in a certain subject, who gather in order to study special problems of their field.

Others prefer to join organizations such as Golden K or Alpha Phi Omega, where service to the university is the primary objective. These groups sponsor mixers, rallies and various contests to help fan school spirit.

Some students are elected to honoraries as a reward for excellence in their chosen fields. The university can offer few honors higher than this. Many of Kent’s honoraries are student affiliates of national professional fraternities.

The religious groups play a very important role in many students’ lives. A great variety of denominations and faiths are represented by clubs on campus, which not only allows students of similar religious backgrounds to become acquainted with each other, but also permits them to gain a deeper understanding of their faith through instruction by these groups.

Another classification of clubs might be labeled the "just for fun" type, but even these further the student's education while he is doing something he really enjoys. Into this category fall Sharks Club, Orchesis, University Theatre and others.

Why the extensive number and variety of groups at KSU? They exist because students have expressed a desire for fellowship with others who share certain specific interests.

But the organizations are not separate entities. They often combine to sponsor university-wide events, such as Homecoming and Rowboat Regatta. In fact, every campus-wide activity at Kent is actually formed and backed by a series of organizations.

For instance, KSU has had political rallies and a Little United Nations Assembly, which helped add reality to classroom work and enabled students to gain, as well as apply, knowledge of world and national affairs.

Dramatics, musical organizations, The Daily Kent Stater and The Chestnut Burr all are services needed by the university as well as being excellent student workshops.

On the social side of student activities can be listed the dances: Top Hop, Military Ball, Homecoming, etc., and annual competitive events, such as Campus Day, Rowboat Regatta, Pork Barrel and Penny Carnival. Without the backing of campus organizations, these events would not exist.

Only a few of KSU's organizations and functions they sponsor have been mentioned because the list is huge. One thing is certain. There is always something to do on campus if students will merely look to find it.
Flashes Hit New Low

A near record number of fans, substantially more than in 1960, saw the 1961 Golden Flashes football team suffer their worst season in the history of the school.

Early season predictions for the team were high, but losses due to injuries and academic difficulties seriously cut into the squad’s effectiveness. The injury of star quarterback Jim Flynn during Kent’s 21-0 loss to Miami seemed to set the team back and recovery eluded them all season.

Despite the depressing effect of losing the close ones, the team never seemed to lose its fire and competitive spirit. Comments from every opponent indicated this as they would remark how, even though behind, the Flash runners and tacklers hit as hard as any others they had encountered.

Next season must be better. The backfield will have considerable experience to field and with a little luck, health and grades will this time work in the Flashes favor.

A mistake in evaluating the grades of sophomore Bob Coen cost the Flashes another win. Kent beat West Virginia Wesleyan, 79-58, in the Canton Invitational Tournament, but the win was forfeited when it was discovered that Coen was ineligible for the contest.

Track Training Revised

Newly arrived from Boston university, head track coach Doug Raymond ran head on into a tough track and country schedule equipped with only the remnants of a sagging squad. He immediately set upon a program to revitalize the track picture and refused to let losses discourage either himself or his runners.

The 1960-61 track season saw KSU's colors carried to several national events. Even though they won no honors the team gained the poise and confidence of experience they will need when Raymond's improved teams return to represent the school.

The cross-country team won four out of nine meets in the regular season and placed fifth in both the Mid-American and the All Ohio meets held at Kent. The varsity track team won only one of the four scheduled meets and placed fifth at the Mid-American Conference meet at Bowling Green.

Chief among Raymond's plans for strengthening the track picture at KSU is emphasis on year-round training and fitness for his runners.

Often much practice is necessary before the proper highjump form is mastered.

NOTE: In cross-country, lowest score wins.

Tennis, Watered Down

Weather, the plague of all sports in the 1961 spring season, played a large part in the fortunes of the Kent tennis team also. Coach Karl Chesnutt hoped to outwit the elements by taking his team on an early season jaunt to the southland but the overcast weather there cancelled two of his three meets, those with Lynchburg and Roanoke Colleges.

Thus handicapped and inexperienced, the squad moved ahead with their schedule and rolled up a creditable 6-7 record. This was good enough to place dark horse Kent in fourth place in the MAC standings as they surprised powerful Bowling Green and Ohio universities.

Lead spots on the team shifted all season long but saw Paul Walker and graduating Joe Chapon carrying most of the load. Adding an unexpected assist were newcomers David Miller and Ray Vens who will return, along with Walker, to pace the 1962 season team.
More gloom. The linksmen won only three of their 17 matches and tied one. But they had a good time playing a lot of golf.

Highlights of the season came as coach Jay Fischer’s team placed 15th out of 23 competing in the All Ohio Match played at Columbus midway through the schedule and tied with Toledo in a triangular meet including Western Michigan. The team placed seventh in the MAC standings.

Newcomers to the team showed their mettle and promised to lead the squad to an improved record in 1962. Low medal score for the year was accomplished by Jim Whitledge and Bill Croskey scored the most points, 35 1/4, of any player throughout the season.

Tankers Break Records

Bill Hoover, in his 14th season as Kent swimming coach, had one of his best teams. The swimmers finished with a 6-4 record and set numerous new marks during the campaign.

This year's squad had broken every Kent swim mark that was on the books. In the last two years, the team has reset every record at least once.

One of the highlights of the year was the win over Miami, 51-37. This was the first time in the school's history that Kent has been able to beat a Redskin tanker team.

Joe Weber and Lowell Nece led the swimmers in the many new records that were set this year.

Weber broke two marks this year, but he reset the record in the 100-yard freestyle three times during the season. The other record he set was in the 50-yard freestyle. Weber was also a member of the record-breaking 400-yard freestyle relay team.

Nece, a sophomore diver from Cleveland, twice set new diving marks. He did this on consecutive days, Feb. 9-10 against Carnegie Tech and Miami.
Injuries Hurt Matmen

Joe Begala’s 1961-62 wrestling team won six of 11 matches this past season. They dropped four and tied one for a 6-4-1 mark. The four defeats were the most losses by a Begala-coached team since 1930.

The Flashes had a 2-3-1 record in the MAC. Bill Pierson, wrestling in the 137-pound class, chalked up 11 wins this year to be the top Flash grappler. The junior from East Liverpool has won 18 matches in two years on the Flash varsity squad. Art Youngblood, second in the heavyweight division in the MAC, was the other consistent Flash during the campaign.

Injuries hurt Begala and his team this season. Don Immarino, co-captain of the squad, Ralph Fox, and Rich Miller were out for most of the year and this cut into the power and depth of the team.

Begala should have a top squad next season since only Youngblood and Immarino will be lost from this year’s team.

Because of few graduations, the team is looking toward a more victorious season next year.
Riflemen Improve

The Kent rifle team finished its regular season with a 6-4 mark. This season's record was a vast improvement over last year when the Flashes won only one of seven meets. The riflemen finished second in the Lake Erie Intercollegiate Rifle Conference under the guidance of Sergeant 1st class James W. Arnold.

Arnold came to Kent this year from Teheran, Iran, where he was advisor to the Imperial Guard. A rifle team mentor at Akron University for three and a half years prior to his stay in Iran, he had a National Championship team there and won the Lake Erie Conference twice.

Jim Miller, letterman from last year's team, was the top shooter for the Flashes.

Bill Schmidt, Bill Goga, Jerry Gosche, Jon Hentosz, Tom Peetz, and Glen Kinzer were members of the Flash rifle squad.

During the warm summer days, the Flash Baseball team played its last games for Coach Matt Resick.
Baseball Places Second in MAC

In his 13th and final year as head baseball coach at Kent, Matt Resick saw his team meet early disappointments as they lost their first four games in pre-season play, then found themselves to set a new school record of nine consecutive wins. An overall season mark of 9-2 was good enough to place the Flashes second in the MAC standings and moved Resick’s record here to 132 wins against 100 losses.

Outstanding team spirit was cited by Resick as responsible for the squad’s ability to respond after initial defeats. Mike Mowchan earned the title of “iron man” by holding down an outfielders post on days he wasn’t called upon to pitch. Paul Serra went nearly the entire season without committing an error on his first-base duties. Harry Kalbaugh’s fielding and hitting earned him a contract with a major league club and southpaw Pete Baltic’s steady pitching kept the bats on the hitter’s shoulders.

Carol Adds More Honors

Carol Vinopal was first honored by being named Outstanding Junior Woman and then was chosen as queen for one of Kent's biggest annual events—Campus Day. Carol, a senior history major, is president of Delta Gamma social sorority. She is active in student government, a member of four honoraries and officer of one. She was named to an edition of "Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges."
Cadets Chose Joann

Blond, blue-eyed Air Force sponsor, JoAnn Mascow, was chosen by the ROTC cadets to reign as queen over the 15th annual military ball. The four runners-up served as her attendants. JoAnn is a junior from Westlake and is majoring in elementary education. She has served as pledge master of Alpha Xi Delta social sorority and is active in the Kent Choraliers. She enjoys seasonal water sports—skiing, swimming and skating.
Pearlmarie Yount, now graduated, was chosen to reign as Rowboat Regatta queen in 1961. At present she is teaching at an elementary school in Akron plus taking classes toward her Master's degree. Besides being a campus queen, she has placed in many statewide beauty contests. Pearlmarie, who is from Silver Lake, is also an accomplished harpist. She is a member of Delta Gamma social sorority and the Association for Childhood Education.
Kathy Welcomes Homecomers

Kathy Zimmerman, a blond, brown-eyed senior from Lake Milton, was elected 1961 Homecoming Queen by the student body. She is majoring in business administration and was awarded a scholarship by the Student Education Association. Kathy's other activities include being a Moulton Hall judicial board member and treasurer of Phi Gamma Nu honorary. She was selected by Mademoiselle as a college board representative.
Charles Denny
Duke of Kent

Student Council President Charles Denny was elected from a field of five contestants to reign as Duke of Kent at Top Hop winter quarter. Denny, a senior speech major from Parma and a member of Delta Upsilon fraternity, was also named Outstanding Junior Man of the Year last year. He was nominated by Student Council's Courtesy and Awards Committee on the basis of personality, character and service to the university.

Carol Vinopal
Miss Kent State

Beginning the festivities of Top Hop weekend this January was the naming of pretty Carol Vinopal as Miss Kent State. Miss Vinopal, senior history major from Akron, was honored at the Top Hop dance along with Chuck Denny, who was named Duke of Kent. She was picked from five contenders by a campus-wide election. Carol reigned as Campus Day Queen last May. Also, she is a member of Delta Gamma sorority.
Student Council

Student Council is the legislative body of student government on the KSU campus. It is composed of 38 members representing the residence halls, Panhellenic Council, Interfraternity Council, Men's Student Association, and Associated Women Students. Each member is chosen on a competitive basis, consisting of an examination on parliamentary procedure and close scrutiny by a screening committee. Student Council is responsible for recommendations to the administration on matters of student affairs, appointments to student-faculty committees and the supervision of campus elections. Council also selects finalists for the Duke of Kent, and Miss Kent State.

GOVERNING

AWS

Every woman student registered at KSU automatically becomes a member of Associated Women Students, the women's governing body on campus. The regulations of the organization state that AWS is a "medium by which the physical, mental and spiritual standards of the University may be promoted." Stemming from the first women's governing body of 1920, AWS has witnessed various changes in its structure, the most recent being the addition of an Activities Board this year. Among campus functions supported by the group are Mom-Me Weekend, Dad's Day, Pork Barrell, Rebellion Ball, President's Banquet, a Senior Women's Banquet and a tea for new faculty. The group also publishes the Kent Coed each year.
Pork Barrel, an annual event every winter quarter, is co-sponsored by the Associated Women Students. This is Delta Zeta's entry.

It looks like everyone is listening attentively as the president of Associated Women's Student's, Marie Fiedler, is making her speech. President Bowman is to her right.

MSA

The first introduction to Men’s Student Association, to which every male student belongs, comes through the Frosh Book, which offers University information, traditions and hints to help freshmen adjust to campus life. To avoid confusion, the organization is working toward having one “handbook” for all men’s organizations. They are also promoting the MSA Appeal Board for all KSU men and organizations. MSA has representatives on Social Committee, Student Council and Golden K. The association sponsors the President’s Banquet, senior men’s banquet, Freshman Preview, Activities Fair, MSA Derby and other events. Pork Barrel and Dad’s Day are co-sponsored by MSA and AWS.

The brothers of Theta Chi are not only enjoying themselves with their singing, but the audience also seems entranced.

Cardinal Key

Twice a year, certain women students can be seen on campus carrying large keys. Contrary to the wishful thinking of the male population, these are not "the keys to their hearts." The key identifies the pledges of Cardinal Key, national women's honor sorority. After petitioning for membership, applicants are chosen on the basis of their grades, activities and characters. Membership in this organization is one of the highest honors a woman at Kent State can receive. Members usher at school functions, co-sponsor a mixer and Penny Carnival, and serve as the Campus Day Queen court. The outstanding senior woman is presented with the Cardinal Key Womanhood Award during Senior Week.

HONORARY

Blue Key

Providing three yearly scholarships and sending Daily Kent Staters to former students now in the armed forces with funds acquired from Penny Carnival are two of the many services provided by Blue Key, national fraternity. They also distribute University Directories. "Serving I Live" is their motto. Men must possess leadership qualities, be active in campus organizations and have a record of service to the university to be eligible for membership in the honorary. The fraternity is open to junior and senior men with an accumulative point average above the all-men's average. Pledges are recognized by the blue cane they carry during their pledging period.
Delta Psi Kappa

Forty push-ups! Twenty-nine sit-ups in thirty seconds! Sound impossible? Maybe for a freshman in physical fitness but not for a member of Delta Psi Kappa, national professional honorary for women in the field of health and physical education. Membership is open to any major or minor in the fields of physical education, recreation, and health, who has completed 12 hours of H.P.E. and has a 3.0 in her major while maintaining a 2.5 accum. The aims of the organization are to promote friendship and welfare among its members. Dances, mixers and Folk Dance Festival, sponsored by the group are some of their social activities. Advisor is Mrs. Virginia Harvey.
Alpha Lambda Delta, Front row, l-r: Dean Margaret J. Beverly Reynolds. High grades throughout college are encouraged by this honorary.

Alpha Lambda Delta

Freshman women who have a 3.5 accumulative average after their second or third quarter of work at KSU are eligible for membership in Alpha Lambda Delta, Kent's branch of the national freshman women's honorary society. Since the group at Kent was organized in the spring of 1960, it has maintained an average of 45 members. At first, the group here was strictly an honorary, but this year it has worked with other service organizations in various campus projects. The purpose of the club is to promote high scholarship among freshman women and to encourage continued high scholastic achievement. Dean of Women Margaret Forsythe and Miss Frances Harshburger are advisors.

Delta Omicron

Are you a music major or minor with a 3.0 accumulative average in your music courses? Would you like the opportunity to become more familiar with really good music and new composers while at the same time you learn to improve your own performance and grades? Do you enjoy performing in concerts for community groups? If your answer is "yes" to these questions, then you should explore the possibilities of becoming a member of Delta Omicron, international professional music fraternity. In addition to these more serious functions, Delta Omicron sponsors banquets, coke parties and a tree trimming party at Christmas. Prof. Philip Macomber is the adviser to Delta Omicron.

Laurels

The purpose of Laurels, Kent's senior women's honorary, is "to promote a feeling of loyalty to the university, to advance the spirit of service and fellowship among KSU women, to maintain a high standard of scholarship, to recognize and encourage leadership and to stimulate and develop character." To attain membership in the organization, women of junior standing are recommended by faculty members, and those chosen are tapped early on Honors Day morning, spring quarter. Among campus activities of Laurels are the sponsorship of a tea for students in the Honors Program, selection of an outstanding sophomore woman, ushering for Honors Day and Commencement and selling corsages for Mom-Me Weekend.

In the kitchenette of one of the women’s dorms, two members of Kappa Omicron Phi, national professional home economics honorary, are trying to open a box of prepared cake mix. After failing to remove the top by pushing and pulling with her fingers, one of the girls cuts herself with the knife which was to be used to open the box. Finally, they decide to make the cake the easy way, at least for a Kappa Omicron Phi, and start preparing the batter from scratch. The purpose of this honorary is to promote better living in the home and to further the best interests of home economics on campus. Members must have a 3.0 average in 12 hours of home ec. courses and maintain a 2.5 accum.

All brawn and no brains? Not on your life! The men of Phi Epsilon Kappa, physical education honorary, must maintain a 3.0 average in their major and a 2.5 accumulative average in order to retain membership in the organization. Men must have a major or minor in the field of Health and Physical Education and must have attained sophomore standing. Goals of the group are to raise professional standards and ethics and to foster research in the HPE field. The 20 members of the fraternity sponsor professional meetings for the HPE department and take an active part in the establishment and direction of various projects of the department. Frank Ballenger is advisor to the group.
Study, study, study. That's what freshman men must do to obtain the 3.5 average required to apply for membership in Phi Eta Sigma. Kent's chapter of this national honorary was founded in 1957 and has 25 members. To honor outstanding freshman men and to encourage scholastic achievement are the aims of this society. The men also hope to improve academic standards through recognition. Each quarter the group has initiation ceremonies and in the spring it holds a banquet with Alpha Lambda Delta, national freshman women's honorary. This fall a national biennial convention was held at the University of Maryland. Advisor is Prof. Chalmers Monteith.

Publication of an English handbook written by members for university students is one of the campus services done by Pi Omega Pi, national business education honorary. Majors and minors in the field of business education are eligible for membership in the club if they maintain a 3.0 in business courses, a 3.0 in four hours of education and a 2.5 overall accumulative average. Other services of the organization, which stresses high scholarship, include a picnic for Kent area underprivileged children in the spring, a panel for business education majors and minors held Winter quarter and aid in the Homecoming Alumni Reception in the College of Business Administration.

Phi Eta Sigma

Pi Omega Pi
Do you have the desire to become another “Dear Abby” or a future writer for “Mad Magazine?” If you are a junior or senior woman journalism major or minor, maintain a 3.0 in journalism, have a 2.5 accum. and work on a University publication, Theta Sigma Phi might be able to help you further this ambition. This organization is the national fraternity for women in professional journalism. To work for a free and responsible press, to encourage members to greater individual effort, and to recognize distinguished achievements of women in journalism are some of their aims. Social activities include a coffee hour for journalism alumni held at Homecoming.

Pencil in one hand and camera in the other, the men of Sigma Delta Chi professional journalism society, are always ready when something newsworthy occurs on campus. However, news stories are not their only concern. The purpose of Sigma Delta Chi is to associate journalists of talent and energy with members of their own profession and to advance the standards of the press by fostering a higher ethical code. The group encourages high school students to enter the field through the sponsorship each year of a High School Press Clinic in which a mock news event is staged. Requirements for membership include a 2.75 average in journalism courses and a 2.3 accum.
HONORARY

Kappa Delta Pi

Will you someday guide the destiny of the next generation? Are you a junior or senior with a scholastic average above a 3.0? If you meet these requirements, you are eligible for membership in Kappa Delta Pi, national education honorary. To further the high ideals and aims of higher education and to give recognition to those who have attained high scholastic standards are the purposes of this fraternity. The group attempts to offer greater insight into the problems, merits, and opportunities of the teaching field. The Amos T. Herr scholarship award is presented each year to an outstanding senior in the College of Education, who has demonstrated interest in teaching.
Phi Alpha Theta

What do you know about the Battle of Bunker Hill? Can you trace Queen Victoria's family tree? What was the date of the bombing at Pearl Harbor? No, this isn't a history exam. It's just a very slight example of the great variety of facts which could probably be recited at the drop of a hat by any member of Phi Alpha Theta, Kent State's history department-sponsored honorary. Main purpose of the organization, which was founded in 1938 as a local historical association, is to promote an interest in history. The honorary requires members to maintain a 3.0 accumulative average in history and a 3.0 in two-thirds of all other courses. The adviser is Prof. Robert Jones.

Sigma Alpha Eta

The national honorary for speech and hearing therapy majors, Sigma Alpha Eta, was founded to create and stimulate interest in the field, to offer opportunities for social and professional fellowship, and to provide situations in which students and faculty may work together to advance the profession. Members must be enrolled in a speech and hearing curricula and have a 3.0 the previous quarter and a 2.5 accumulative average. The group serves the community by aiding in the area of handicapped rehabilitation. Many social activities are held during the year including a get-acquainted picnic in the fall, skating parties, a spring picnic, and a banquet.

Row 4: Judy Galehouse, James Vargo, Ken Johnson, Ron Isle, Pat Murphy, Jean Siler. Every year this group sponsors a picnic during the spring quarter.
Kappa Kappa Psi

Demonstrating that, although their forte may be musical instruments, the men of Kappa Kappa also sing: the group took second place in Songfest last year in the Independent Men's division. Organized under the leadership of Professor Edward L. Masters of the School of Music, Kappa Kappa Psi is composed of male members of the University Band who have completed two quarters in the band with a 3.5 accumulative average and a 2.25 average in the rest of their studies. Social activities of the group include an annual mixer and provision of refreshments for high school bands on Band Day and for visiting bands from other universities throughout the country.

Alpha Psi Omega

An actor's life is the life for me! This is the philosophy held by members of Alpha Psi Omega, national dramatics fraternity, which has as its purpose promotion of excellence in dramatic arts. Budding actors, actresses and workers in all phases of the theatre are required to earn 100 points in work both on and off the stage in order to be eligible for membership in this organization. Alpha Psi has worked hand in hand with the University Theatre, since the installation of the local chapter, in such projects as the presentation of annual awards to outstanding members, selling refreshments during intermissions and planning of social activities.

Men's Glee Club  University Theatre

The opening of Campus Day festivities begins with the Kent State alma mater, sung by the Men's Glee Club. This relatively new group was organized in 1957 by Dr. John D. White of the music department. It's principle aim is to build an appreciation for finer music literature and to develop musicianship among the members. The group presents a traditional spring concert and they perform at various high schools throughout the area introducing students to finer music. Membership is open to all male students upon satisfactory audition. The members represent almost every department of the university. Presently, the glee club is directed by John Hurd.

An organization which acts as business manager for dramatic activities on campus is the University Theatre Staff. Originally organized by Prof. E. Turner Stump, the group not only handles business matters for University Theatre participants, but provides for social activities within the group. Some of these activities are receptions before play tryouts, special parties during the year and a picnic each spring. The UT Staff also aids Kent's faculty with a winter quarter Drama Clinic for high school students. Members are selected from applicants at the end of spring quarter for the following year. Advisor to the staff is G. Harry Wright of the Speech department.

Merrymen

Strolling past the men's dormitories some evenings, one can hear strange noises. Upon further investigation, male students can be seen clearing and spraying their throats. No, these are not those unfortunate people who failed to get their flu shots, for suddenly they burst into song, "When I hear a melody, I love to sing along." Ah, now we've got it, Mitch Miller and his gang. This appears to be another fallacy as we observe that these men are attired in gray blazers with crests. At last we realize we have been watching the Merrymen of Kent preparing for one of their performances which include: Pork Barrel, dormitory parties and open houses, faculty teas, and civic meetings.
Koraliers

If you are a woman student who loves to sing, the Kent Koraliers may be just the organization for you. Membership is open to all KSU women students upon audition. This glee club, which has been in existence since the inception of the School of Music, adopted the name "Kent Koraliers" in 1955. The 50 coeds which comprise the organization perform both sacred and secular music under the direction of Dr. Ralph E. Hartzell of the School of Music. While emphasis is placed upon the training function of Koraliers, the club also participates in the presentation of an annual Library Christmas Concert, a Spring Concert in May and other campus performances throughout the school year.

Every year at Christmas, the Koraliers present a program in the Library.
Panel of Americans  Ukrainian Students

One of the most interesting and thought-provoking organizations on the campus is the Panel of Americans, which was first organized at Kent in 1959. The aims of the group are based on the philosophy that individual thought can best be stimulated by exposing people of diverse backgrounds to each other's ideas. The members appear before campus and community audiences to discuss freely the issues of race and religion. A panel consists of five student speakers, Roman Catholic, Protestant, Jewish, Negro and an American of other ethnic origin, each of whom speaks as an individual. A desire to help make the average citizen aware of prejudice in his own community is the only requirement for membership.

February 14, 1961 was a red-letter day for members of the Ukrainian Student Club. This was the day KSU officials ratified the club's constitution, thereby recognizing the organization as an integral part of Kent State's campus body. The group, in existence here since 1955, is composed of students of Ukrainian descent who wish closer ties with members of their own nationality in intellectual and social pursuits. Members also learn more about Ukrainian culture and customs through participation in this group, which engages in various social functions, such as dances and concerts. Participation in KSU's annual International Festival is another highlight on the organization's social roster.
“Hup, two, three, four—Hup, two, three, four.” You can almost hear the ants calling these signals as they carry away food from the annual fall picnic for Freshman HPE majors. But what’s a little food? The freshmen are enjoying themselves, just as all members of the Health and Physical Education Club do. Having fun isn’t the club’s function. Its goal is to promote professional interest and to stimulate better student relationship through recreation. The club, composed of HPE majors and minors, achieves its purpose with talks and discussions by professional educators and recreation leaders, sponsoring athletic teams within the club and giving gifts to the needy at Christmas.

Arnold Air Society

Members of the Air Force ROTC who excel in their scholastic achievements may be eligible for the Arnold Air Society, professional, honorary service organization. The society is a combination professional and social organization for members who must attain a 2.25 accumulative average and a 2.5 in air science courses. The aim of the honorary is the furtherance of interest in air power on the campus, in the community and in the nation. Members, who wear blue and gold braids and service ribbons, annually co-sponsor the Military Ball. The organization frequently sponsors other dances and field trips to military installations. The Kent chapter of the honorary was formed in 1951.
"Footstompers" can have their day at Kent State University by joining the Air Force ROTC's Silver Eagles drill team. Footstomping, of course, is just one of the many techniques used by the Silver Eagles to present unique, precision drill movements. Known on campus as "the drill team," the Silver Eagles present special exhibitions of their drill maneuvers at Kent and other college campuses as well as in national competition each year. Members of the organization are outstanding AFROTC members who strive to meet the high standards of the team and develop themselves as future military and civilian leaders.

Angel Flight

Adding service and a touch of beauty to Arnold Air Society and the Air Force ROTC, is Angel Flight, a group of approximately 20 young women who act as sponsors for these groups. This organization was started at Kent State in 1960. Primarily an agent of Arnold Air Society, member’s aims are to advance, promote and aid the interest and progress of that society. Through Angel Flight, the members become more conscientious of their responsibility to the country and to Kent State. The women hostess Arnold Air Society functions and usher at various university events. An annual convention and area conclaves are held for Angel Flight.

Advanced junior and senior cadets of excellent military standing are those selected to become members of Scabbard and Blade, a national honorary organized at Kent in 1949. Scabbard and Blade was founded in 1904 at the university of Wisconsin by a group of college men who felt that such a military society was necessary to develop and foster the ideals and practice of military education. Purposes of the group are service to the university and the ROTC program, to improve members as future officers and to unite advanced cadets in a closer relationship. Speakers and films further the military education of members. Scabbard and Blade, along with Arnold Air Society, co-sponsors the Military Ball.
Pershing Rifles

Fifteen trophies in the last three years are proof of the efficiency of Company K, first regiment of the Pershing Rifles at KSU. Three first-place trophies in regional drill competition adorn the company’s shelves. This largest military fraternity in the country was founded by General John J. Pershing. The purpose of the organization is to instill the ideals of military honor, character, and leadership in its members. An annual activation dance in January, smokers, parties, and aid in planning the Military Ball are several of their activities. Members also usher at all home football games and provide a color guard for various university occasions.

Delta Sigma Pi

What fraternity combines business with pleasure? Of course, it's Delta Sigma Pi, national organization for men in the field of business administration. This group not only encourages scholarship and closer affiliation between the business world and students of commerce, but also provides a well-rounded social life for its members. The social roster includes a Christmas formal, a Monte Carlo party and a Rose formal at which a "Rose of Delta Sig" is elected by the brothers. The fraternity lists, as services to the campus, membership on Student Council's development committee and a representative to Student Council on behalf of the College of Business Administration.

It looks like everything is set for Saturday night since Doug Smith is displaying such a broad grin. Sam DeAngelo waits his turn on the phone.
Unbuttoning his white lab coat, a scientist at the Cleveland Chemical Co., said, "Welcome, my friends of the Kent State Chemical Society." He spoke to members of the Student Affiliates of the American Chemical Society, who had devoted one of their monthly meetings to a tour of the company. A few months before, they had visited a chemical company near Akron. During other meetings, they stayed on campus to hear more about their favorite subject from noted workers in the chemistry field. Throughout the year, the group also found time to apply their chemistry to a consideration of what would mix well as a menu for an annual Christmas party.

"You want to come to a pancake supper?"
"Mmmm—sure would! Home Ec. Club?"
"No, Industrial Arts."
"Oh. (Hotcakes probably mixed with a buffer and cooked with a blowtorch.) Well, uh . . . Thanks anyway, fella, not this time." Actually, the pancakes were good. They even had syrup, a great tribute to the foresight of the chairman of the supply committee. In addition to this supper, the Industrial Arts Club sponsors a field trip, a square dance, a technical lecture and an annual banquet. If it sounds to you as if half the organized activities are eating parties, you are mistaken. They ate at the square dance, too.

Aerospace Sciences

To further interest in the aerospace sciences and to disseminate the latest information in these fields are the principle aims of the Institute of the Aerospace Sciences. To keep members up to date on current developments, the organization maintains a library service for aeronautical literature and provides films and thesis topics. Other services offered are field trips, guest speaker conferences and an aeronautical periodicals library. Social activities, such as hayrides, are arranged for members. Annually, the institute presents awards to outstanding seniors for scholarship and best lecture presentation. Members must be physics, math or aviation technology majors.

Meddent Club

Although most of the students in Meddents are aspiring doctors, dentists, medical technicians, or nurses, present members include art majors planning to illustrate medical journals and one future game warden. The group meets twice a month and features distinguished speakers from professional medical organizations. The members have taken field trips to Akron General, Akron City, and Ravenna hospitals. Meddents was organized in 1950 to encourage scholarship and to promote contacts and co-operation between students and professionals in the medical sciences. Social events include dinners, parties, and hayrides. Kenneth Kelly is the adviser.

Phi Gamma Nu

Need any term papers or themes typed? If, contact the typing bureau maintained by Phi Gamma Nu, Rho chapter of the national business honorary. This group not only provides its typing service to KSU but recently enhanced its scholastic prestige by winning second place in the national scholarship contest of Phi Gamma Nu. Its social roster isn’t barren by any means either, since members sponsor a Christmas party, a party for graduating seniors, a Founder’s Day Banquet and meetings with prospective members in the fields of office administration and business education, each year. The group also presents a scholarship key on Honors Day to an outstanding senior woman.
Acting as hostesses for representatives from all over the state of Ohio at the annual meeting was a highlight in the program of KSU's branch of the Association for Childhood Education this year. This group has as its primary requirement for membership an interest in working with and for children. The 125 members prepare boxes to be given to school children during the year and gain on-the-spot teaching experience through going into schools in the Kent area to teach the children concepts they have learned in workshops on campus. The club sponsors two coffee hours each quarter and holds a meeting each month. Each spring the organization sends delegates to the National ACE convention.

ACE
Membership in the Student Education Association is open to all enrolled in the College of Education. Purposes of the organization include personal and professional growth for members, development of leadership skills, and participation in professional education activities at local, state and national levels. Among services to the campus and community, the club lists sponsorship of a scholarship each year to some outstanding person in the education field and High School Day, held twice a year, in which members guide groups of prospective University entrants around the campus and answers questions confronting college-bound students. SEA sponsors mixers on campus throughout the year.

Management Society

"To serve as an effective medium for the exchange and distribution of information on the problems, policies and methods of industry and management" is the goal of KSU's Society for the Advancement of Management. Membership in this group is open to any upperclassman interested in advancing the managerial profession. The Management Society brings closer together for discussion of problems and methods present executives and students preparing to go into the field of business. The club achieves this through its quarterly management lecture, Regional Officers' Conference for Ohio chapters of the group and through sponsorship of a Personnel Management Conference.

A comment of editor Laird Brown concerning the story which they are rewriting brings laughter from associate editors Adda Bogun and Judy Bryan.

Chestnut Burr

Originally, the college yearbook was created as a catalog of the students attending a school. As colleges grew more and more of the year's activities, or "highlights," were added. Soon the yearbook became a pictorial story of the school year, in addition to being a catalog of students. But the great amount of portraits and group pictures required to illustrate the many organizations has seriously retarded application of modern photojournalism techniques to the "highlights" section because of compromises necessary for a consistent style throughout one book.

Because the Chestnut Burr is handled through the School of Journalism as a laboratory in photojournalism, it is desirable that the laboratory be closely related to commercial editing practices. The Chestnut Burr staff feels that by separating the "highlights" from the catalog material, each section can be presented in its best format without interference, producing an easy-to-use, indexed listing of students, and an enjoyable and informative magazine story of the year's events.

Kent Stater

If the question, "Who consumes the most coffee from the Hub" ever came up, the answer would most likely be—the people who work in that big office at the end of Merrill Hall, the staff of the Daily Kent Stater. But in addition to boosting Hub coffee sales, the Stater staff provides coverage for important campus and area news events, and serves as a practical workshop for journalism students and all other students interested in any phase of newspaper work. Published four times a week, the Stater requires constant preparation while adhering to the goal painted on the wall of the office, "Nothing Short of Right is Right." The editor and business manager are chosen each quarter by application to the Publications Policy Committee.

Agreeing that the Spring 1961 Stater did "stink" (perfume in the ink) are Joe Werne, editor, Tom Schley, managing editor, and Joe Focer, business manager.

On a rare occasion, the Stater staff is gathered at the keyhole desk where their copy finally reaches. These individuals are usually found anywhere ranging from Student Council meetings to the Hub.
Aims of the Christian Science Organization are to welcome and encourage students beginning the study of Christian Science and to uphold the name and spirit of Christian Science among activities of the students and faculty at Kent State University. The group, made up of 14 students, sponsors a Christian Science lecture each year, participates in KSU's annual Conference on Religion and has been a member of the University Religious Council. Social activities of the group include an annual buffet supper for prospective freshman members. An international meeting of all Christian Science Organizations is held biennially in Boston, Massachusetts.

Kent State's branch of the Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship is an interdenominational religious group begun by six students in 1951. Today the group is made up of approximately 30 members, who hold as their purpose fellowship in Christian living through prayer, Bible study and social activities—and to bring before university students the question of God's will and the call to serve Him in every walk of life. The organization participates in conferences, summer camps and the International Student Missionary Convention with representatives from campuses throughout the nation. This year the club sent several representatives to the missionary convention.

Many denominations are represented in this group.
The Eastern Orthodox Fellowship on campus has as its purpose the promotion of an understanding of Orthodoxy in religious, educational, cultural and social activities. Any person of Eastern Orthodox faith at the University is eligible for membership. Hayrides, coffee hours, freshman tea, and picnics highlight the social roster of the organization, while service projects include aid to an aged people’s home in Hiram and participation in religious services in neighboring areas. The group sends representatives to the Eastern Orthodox Fellowship Convention of Ohio each year. The organization was established on Kent’s campus in 1955. The advisor is Michael Dubetz.

Religious

Kappa Phi

Following the aim, “Every Methodist woman in the university world today, a leader in the church of tomorrow,” Kappa Phi trains members to be good Christian homemakers, active church women with an awareness of service at home and abroad and develops leadership as well as social and cultural qualities. This national organization for Methodist women gives college coeds the advantages of a closely-knit sisterhood. Service projects include baby-sitting for members of the Methodist church, providing Christmas and Thanksgiving baskets for needy families, making favors for children in the area hospitals, and working at Wesley House. They have social functions with Sigma Theta Epsilon and the Wesley Foundation.
Gamma Delta

Gamma Delta. The words mean knowledge and service. This international organization of Lutheran students fosters the study of the Bible, spreads the scriptural philosophy of life, and trains its members for Christian service. Members attend the Northeastern Gamma Delta Convention, an international retreat, and a winter and spring camp each year. Parties, hayrides, square dances, and dinners for members and their guests are among the group's social activities. Gamma Delta actives are communicant members of a Lutheran church of the Missouri Synodical conference. Associate members have most of the same rights and privileges that the actives have.
Newman Club

A new Newman Center, the dream of all Newmanites on campus, became reality in November when the $250,000 center was completed. The center houses the Newman Club, an organization dedicated to achieve a balanced program of religious, social and cultural activities for Catholic students on campus. Masses are celebrated each morning and members meet in the afternoon for Rosary recitation. Coffee hours and religious classes are offered for those interested in learning more about the faith. Pilgrim's Prom, Mardi Gras, Autumn Leaf Twirl, hayrides and an annual picnic are among social activities of the club. The club received a second-place trophy for its Campus Day float.
One of the largest organizations on campus, boasting 1,499 unofficial members, the Wesley Foundation is the meeting place for all Methodist preference students, and others who are interested in programs sponsored by Wesley. Two service organizations sponsored by Wesley are Sigma Theta Epsilon for Methodist men and Kappa Phi for Methodist women. These groups in conjunction with the foundation, sponsor a service project for each year. Open House every Friday evening and a rendezvous each Saturday are among activities which help students to become acquainted with each other and with Wesley Foundation and its director, Rev. A. Duane Frayer. The foundation also sponsors retreats.

These students look like they are enjoying their Sunday dinner. Wesley House has its own program every Sunday, including dinner.
Among the aims of Sigma Theta Epsilon, Methodist preference men’s organization, are participation in worthwhile service projects, Christian training and cultivation of future leaders of the church. A well-rounded social life is also advocated by the group as is evidenced by the annual Founders Day Banquet and dance, a Valentine’s Day dance and swimming parties with Kappa Phi, Sigma Theta Epsilon’s feminine counterpart. Services of the group include help with KSU’s Bloodmobile and providing a team of ushers at the Kent Methodist Church on Sundays. The men also took an Honorable Mention in the Independent Men’s division in Songfest last year.
Alpha Phi Omega

At KSU "service" and Alpha Phi Omega are synonymous. The group sponsors a wide variety of activities such as Career Day, New Student Program, the annual quartet contest and an all-university mixer. Aiding local Boy Scout organizations, sending Care packages, assisting with the Blood Drive and providing a transportation sign-up for commuters rounds out their list of services. The first national Annual Leadership Conference was held last August for Alpha Phi Omega chapters, whose goals are dedicated to further the principles of leadership, friendship and service. Founded at Kent in 1941, it is one of more than 300 chapters.
New Student Program

The New Student Program gives freshmen an introduction to college. What does this include? Think—what do college people do most? Oh, well, that’s not exactly . . . that is, well, next to that, KSU students walk. They walk up hills and around buildings, on sidewalks and through parking lots. And they walk fast. This is because they are late. So new students are dog-trotted over the campus to make sure they’re in shape for their first day of classes. Then they stand in line for shots. This is excellent practice as it prepares them for Hub-standing and eating-line standing. They are treated to lengthy lectures on a variety of fascinating subjects. This is for obvious reasons. With these experiences and the ability to produce phenomena such as the five-second printed address, Kent’s freshmen face college life less hesitantly. They know what to expect.

Golden K

This year Golden K became an elective group and now represents all campus organizations. Each dormitory, sorority, and fraternity is represented at Golden K meetings, and all university students are automatic members. There are also two off-campus representatives and three members at large. Golden K works in co-ordination with Student Council to promote school spirit, sportsmanship, and pride. This organization sponsors the cheerleaders, Flasherettes (women's precision drill team), pep rallies, basketball halftime, and campus tours, as well as numerous other activities. Golden K also sponsors Rowboat Regatta each year. Roger Bishop, HPE instructor, is the new advisor.

AIA

An annual architectural display featuring the works of students is presented in the spring by the student chapter of the American Institute of Architects, a group established to provide a transition from student standing to professional life. Students in the organization are majors in architecture who must have completed 16 quarter hours to obtain membership. Delegates are sent to the national AIA convention and field trips are taken to observe works of outstanding architects. The group sponsors conferences featuring guest speakers on campus and members enjoy an annual summer banquet. The chapter, established in 1955, is advised by Prof. Joseph Morbito.

Social Committee

If you enjoy the three largest social events on campus (and who doesn’t?) you have the Social Committee to thank for directing them. Yes, all phases of Homecoming, Top Hop and Campus Day are planned and carried out by this important branch of Student Council. Its function is, not only to provide KSU students with worthwhile social events, but to establish and enforce the social code on campus. The group also publishes a handbook for social committee chairmen of residence halls. Made up of both faculty and students, the committee has 15 members appointed by Inter-Fraternity Council, Student Council, MSA and AWS, three members elected at large and faculty members.
Kent State’s Little United Nations Assembly last spring quarter provided good public relations for the Kent Internationals. Many of the members not born in the U. S. represented their native countries at the assembly and gave American-born students a better understanding of the customs, foreign policies and cultures of other countries. Members of the Kent Internationals are foreign and American students interested in helping foreign students become acquainted with the American way of life and to give these students opportunities to pursue their expressed goals. The group co-sponsors an International Festival with the International Relations Club. Assist. Dean Mark Anthony is adviser.
Cleops Club

Originally founded as an interest group in 1959, the Cleop Club now has as its goal, certification as a local chapter of Delta Sigma Theta, national social sorority. The organization was granted probationary membership in KSU’s Panhellenic Council during spring quarter, 1961. Purposes of the group are service, leadership and scholarship. The girls sponsor various social activities throughout the year, usher at university functions and gave financial aid to an orphan child in Kent. They participate in intramurals. Requirements for membership are a 2.0 accumulative average and completion of one quarter’s work for freshmen and a 2.3 previous quarter and 2.3 accum. for upperclassmen.
Recognition and acceptance by Interfraternity Council and colonization as Tau Beta Rho colony of Tau Kappa Epsilon are major aims of the Teake Travelers. Ultimate goal is to become a chapter of TKE, the largest national social fraternity in the country. The group was founded in 1959 by TKE members who transferred to KSU from campuses with regular TKE chapters. Requirements for membership are a 2.1 accumulative average and a 2.1 the previous quarter. The Travelers participate in Campus Day, Pork Barrel and intramural sports and hold house parties and hayrides. They recently incorporated and formed a Board of Control to aid in financial and property matters.

TEAKE

Home Economics

A major or minor in the field of home economics isn’t only concerned with the method of breaking an egg, boiling water or making a fluffy omelette. She is also interested in developing and furthering a professional knowledge of her field. To help her obtain this goal, she may join KSU’s Home Economics Club. The group sends representatives to Ohio’s Home Economics Association meeting each spring, holds a Christmas dinner for members and also sponsors a Buddy Picnic in the fall to welcome prospective freshman members. Among services to the university, the organization maintains a home economic reference library located in Kent hall, and sells programs at home football games.
Phi Epsilon

As they finish wrapping a newly-bought toy, the sisters of Phi Epsilon recall the smiling faces and sparkling eyes of the underprivileged children who have received unexpected birthday gifts in previous years. This Jewish social club also babysits and gives Thanksgiving and Christmas dinners for a family they adopt through the Kent Welfare Agency each year. The club aims to promote sisterhood and scholarship among its members and to be of service to the University. Social events include rush and date parties, and a booth at Penny Carnival.

WRA

"Come on girls, let's fight!" Although this cry might sound like the beginning of a first-class "rumble," it is in reality the sound one might expect to hear when the women's intramural or varsity teams are playing. The sport in progress might be volleyball, hockey, basketball or almost any other sport in which the girls wish to participate. This intramural and varsity program at Kent State, as well as open and closed clubs in various sports, is directed by the Women's Recreation Association. Membership is obtained automatically by every woman student entering KSU. Members from the sports clubs are selected to participate in intercollegiate competition.
Room stuffing begins with an empty room and a few students filling in the corner.

Never let it be said that women stand idly by while men go on to greater and greater achievements. Ask the opinions of the 176 women of Verder Hall who are still enjoying their success at the latest craze to hit the KSU campus—room stuffing.

It all began when the men of Johnson Hall decided to start a new fad. Groaning and squirming, the men managed to cram 141 of themselves into one dormitory room. They immediately announced their accomplishment as a national record on the basis that it hadn't been tried before. Soon colleges across the country began reporting new highs in room stuffing.

To keep up with the competition, plans were carefully made to stuff one of the larger Lake Hall rooms. This idea, including an intricate floor plan, was snuffed, though, by someone concerned that the newly constructed building might collapse under the weight. Soon stuffing was taboo in all the dorms.

DORMS ARE STUFFED

Under the cloak of secrecy, the women of Verder Hall prepared to challenge the record. Dressed in their finest night-time attire (robes and pajamas), and adding a feminine touch to the squirms, the women stuffed 176 females and 1 male into a room. The male was owned by a psychology major resident and was a guinea pig named "Hemme." A spokesman for Verder said 20 additional women could have fit into the room if a bed hadn't collapsed and sent a few dozen to the floor.

At a practice session, the women stuffed 22 of the fair sex into a bathroom stall. Only the wildest imagination can conceive what the fad will bring to the campus. Perhaps the afore-mentioned psychology major has a master's thesis at hand just waiting to be written. Title? Ten Ways and Psychological Reasons for Room-Stuffing, of course.

by TONY BOGOVITCH

The two most critical operations are selection of participants (by size), above, and counting accurately, right.
141 men later and the room is considered "filled," but the girls topped this with 176.

A new twist is stuffing with newspapers. It takes four hours but makes an interesting surprise for the returning roommate.
Dunbar Hall

Early fall quarter an innocent male student is seen approaching Dunbar Hall. As he nears one of the side doors he can be heard speaking to his friend, "We might as well go right up to Bruce's room. I remember his room number from last year." This boy has quite a surprise in store for him! Dunbar has been converted this year from a men's to a women's residence hall. Various activities such as coke parties, Halloween party, Christmas welfare party, Mom-me Weekend, a formal dance and classes in social dancing offer the coeds diverse entertainment. Lectures on fashions, jewelry, make-up, and hair styles help to keep the residents up-to-date in the beauty world. Getting off to a good start in filling their trophy case, the Dunbar women brought home second place for their Homecoming display. Miss Sandra Fee serves as residence counselor.

Decorating the windows is part of the fun of preparing for special events on campus. "Betty" heralds the approach of Dad's Day.

Dunbar's rec. room is a good spot for watching TV, talking or playing cards. L-r is Judy Serak, Joanne Daly, Pat Benedetto, George Horak and Carol Phillips.

"Moose Top" Alian and Peggy Goodwin find that working together on a term paper eases the pain a little.

Dunbar’s kitchenette is a handy place to whip up something to last through the evening’s studies. Results are not guaranteed.
Engleman Hall

Ever have eight or nine roommates? Although most of the rooms in Engleman Hall are singles, the closeness of the residents and the dorm spirit which prevails, accounts for the fact that at almost anytime of day or night, a group can be found congregated in one of the rooms, having impromptu parties, studying, or just talking. This unity and spirit resulted in obtaining for the dorm a first place trophy for its Campus Day float, third place in Songfest and an Honorable Mention for its Homecoming display last year. Engleman joined the Foster Parent Plan last year through the “adoption” of a 12-year-old Italian boy. Among social activities are parties at Halloween, Christmas and Valentine’s Day.

Record players have almost become standard equipment in dormitory rooms. Here, l-r, Judy Jones, Doris Gamble and Marcia Leed listen to their latest purchase.

Lowry Hall

The oldest women’s residence hall, a traditionally ivy-covered building, is home to 144 KSU coeds. Since 1912, Lowry Hall has played an active part in campus activities, such as Pork Barrel, Homecoming and Campus Day, as a glance at the trophy case will tell. The traditions of scholarship, friendship and just plain fun are carried out by Lowry’s participation in several Coke dances each year, the dorm formal, and numerous dress-up dinners. On a campus increasingly dominated by new and modern buildings, Lowry’s pillared porch and rustic-styled lounges present a homey contrast. Convenience to most of the classroom buildings is another feature, which makes coeds glad to call Lowry their “home away from home” for four years.

You say you want to steal something from the kitchenette but you can’t because the phone is in there and you can feel “her” watching you while she’s talking? You say you can’t hear on the phone because of the loud noises the fudge makes when it’s boiling over? You say you live on the first floor hall, the well-lighted one that opens into the main lobby? You say when your hair’s up in rollers you have to hide whenever someone opens that door? Is that your problem? You say you’ve been having too many fire drills and you found out yesterday that your light switch is a fire-alarm button? You say you wouldn’t trade places with any girl at KSU? A welcome call from home absorbs Sue Itin in the latest happenings in her family and neighborhood.
“Let’s twist again” and “one, two, cha, cha, cha!” can be heard almost any night coming from rooms in Prentice Hall. These sounds verify one of the dorm’s newlyfounded traditions, which is the adoption of “Let’s Swing” as the official motto. Other traditions developed since the hall’s opening in the fall of 1959 include the designation of yellow as the official color and the daisy as the flower. Little Sis Weekend and a banquet honoring seniors were initiated by the girls during the hall’s first year of existence. On Campus Day, they won first place in Songfest with their rendition of “Lullaby of Broadway,” and by invading the vegetable garden with “Beet BG” as their Homecoming display, they won first place.

"Are we s'posed to shut off the lights and leave the door open, or shut the door and turn on the lights?" "Pat hasn't come down yet—she's up there burning to death!" "Hey, you forgot your towel!" The dulcet tones of Verder Hall residents ring through the midnight air as they scramble out the doors during a fire drill. While standing outside, the girls decide to exhibit some of their singing prowess which won them a second-place trophy in Songfest last year, so they break into "Jingle Bells" or "On the Road to Mandalay." When the drill is over, the sleepy coeds are glad to stumble back to their rooms, but on the way many cast an admiring glance at the dorm's well-filled trophy case.

This coed is playing the Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde role as she creates a monster for a Homecoming display.

Bobbie Hunstone and Mona Bartley helped brighten their corridor by gaily decorating their door for Christmas.
It takes night after night of the combined efforts of many girls but the display at last begins to take shape.

"Huh?"

"Well, you see, Terrace is divided into sections. This is South Terrace, but—" Problems such as this, owing to its "duplex" structure, are uniquely Terrace Hall's. In most matters, Terrace acts as a unit. Since it is the largest of the women's dorms, it taps a large reservoir of talent and volunteers for activities, such as Holiday Tea and Open House, and its spring formal; and all 728 girls are proud of their first place in Pork Barrel and of the honorable mention for their Campus Day float.

Johnson Hall

A unique tutoring system has been instituted this year for the men of Johnson Hall. Residents with a 3.0 accum in their major and a 2.5 overall accum have offered their time to tutor other residents in subjects with which they have had trouble. This service is done voluntarily by both tutor and student. Also on the list of activities of the men is the Johnson Journal, a weekly publication staffed by approximately 20 of the residence hall's journalism students. In addition, the men hold an annual Christmas party for underprivileged children, have dances, exchange dinners with girls' dorms and ping pong tournaments. They received first place in Songfest and Campus Day.
"Bowl 'em Over" was the theme of Lake Hall's Homecoming display.

Lake Hall

Native drums echo through the night. South-sea islanders sway to primitive rhythms. The husky natives and their women are the men of Olson Hall and their dates at the new dorm's annual South-Sea Island party, a carry-over tradition from Dunbar Hall, where most of Olson's residents lived last year. Background murals, foliage, a mountain complete with waterfall and a pool stocked with fish decorate the dorm's lounge for this party. The men also participate in campus activities and received first place trophies last year as Dunbar Hall for Penny Carnival and intramural track. The men had the highest scholastic point average of all men's dorms last year.
Olson Hall

A large "fraternity" with the tops in school spirit best describes newly-constructed Lake Hall. The 370 residents, nicknamed the "Yankees," were the first to have their own coat of arms, banner, dorm song and motto. Lake's social roster is filled with events, such as the "Hot Sabaka Hop" (Russian for "hot dog"), the Lake Shake, coke parties and exchange dinners. The Lake Leader provides the residents with campus and dorm news. In addition, the men participate in Homecoming, Campus Day, Pork Barrel and intramural sports. Construction on Lake Hall was completed in time for residents to move in at the beginning of Fall Quarter, 1961. The hall was named for C. H. Lake, past member of the Board of Trustees.
Stopher Hall

A “Wisdom Series” is one of the main activities of Stopher Hall this year. Films covering a wide range of subjects are shown bi-monthly, followed by a lecture by a KSU professor whose field is related to the topic of the film. The social committee keeps busy planning events such as the annual winter and spring formals, and various parties. At Christmas, the men also have a party for underprivileged children. Stopher men also take part in Homecoming, Campus Day, Pork Barrel and intramurals. Fine for outdoor dancing is the terrace above the new Student Activities Center, which connects Stopher and Johnson halls. Four lounges provide Stopher residents with opportunities for TV viewing, ping pong and relaxation.
Inter-Hall Council

Promoting cooperation among KSU's men's residence halls is the purpose of the Inter-Hall Council, founded in 1958 on Kent's campus. The council consists of 12 members, these being the president of each men's resident hall and two representatives from each hall. The group initiated and sponsors the President's Round Table and have taken over sponsorship of the Merrymen of Kent, and activity which was begun independently by residents of the men's halls. Their Hall Council also sponsors dances throughout the school year, in addition to coordinating activities of the men's halls in such efforts as stimulating school spirit at football games. Thomas Hansmier, assistant Dean of Men, is advisor.

"I was going to explain. "It's All Greek to Me" is the booklet Pan-Hellenic Council puts out for our new women students. It tells about what sororities are, rush rules, sorority life and things that confuse many entering freshmen."
"Oh! May we have one, please?"
“What do you mean that I’m a member of a secret society?”

“I’m afraid it’s all a matter of record, President McGilvery. On November 24, 1924, you were initiated as an honorary member of Kent Men’s Klub. We now know that the initials K.M.K. stand for the Greek letters Kappa Mu Kappa, and that this group is a secret fraternity actually rushing, pledging and, I might add, initiating honorary members, right here on our campus.”

After this, President McGilvery had no choice but to approve of other fraternities and sororities.

Before he was trapped in this “if you can’t lick ‘em, pledge ‘em” plan of Kappa Mu Kappa, John E. McGilvery, the first president of Kent State university, was opposed to the Greek system. His view was shared by many of the members of his small faculty. The primary reason for their opposition was the belief that secret societies were essentially undemocratic and that they would tend to divide the student body into factions.

The students did not share these views, and by 1921 pressure had built up for organization of these social groups. It was during this time that the Walden Dramatic Club and the Alpha Epsilon...

Sigma Literary Society were founded. But these first attempts at social organization failed because of lack of student support.

During the winter of 1922, the first local fraternity, Kappa Mu Kappa, was organized. It was referred to as K.M.K. and when the members were questioned as to the meaning of the letters, they would reply, "The Kent Men's Klub."

McGilvrey, thinking that the group was not a secret society, attended a banquet of the K.M.K. and was there initiated into membership. It was not until a few months later that he realized the true identity of the fraternity.

With McGilvrey's determination that there be no secret societies squelched, eleven greek organizations, seven sororities and four fraternities, were established by 1925.

These groups flourished on the local level and it was not until 1947 that national groups were ever considered. Kent State's new president, George Bowman, a Sigma Nu, was sympathetic to Greek organizations and at a faculty meeting on May 22, 1947, a vote was taken which proved favorable.

Less than a month later, the first national sorority was established from the youngest local. Kappa Lambda was organized in May, 1947. This local had a short life, only lasting until June 7, 1947, when thirty girls were initiated into the Lambda Delta chapter of the Chi Omega Fraternity. It was the 100th chapter making the national the largest women's sorority in the United States.

Seven other sororities followed. On October 25, 1947, a 20-year local, Theta Sigma Tau, was initiated into the Gamma Phi Beta sorority. The ceremony was performed in Moulton Hall by chapter members of Ohio Wesleyan University. After being initiated, the members attended a banquet at the Robin Hood Inn where they received their charter from their Grand President.

On August 17, the local Gamma Sigma Phi was pledged to Alpha Xi Delta and November 22, 1947, the coeds were formally installed as Beta Tau chapter of the national sorority.

In 1925, a group was formed called Beta Tau Zeta. In 1926, the name was changed to Pi Kappa Sigma and it became an educational honorary. Pi Kappa Sigma petitioned and pledged in November to Alpha Gamma Delta. Installation took place December 6, 1947, in the music room of Moulton Hall as the local women joined the nationwide sorority. Installing officers, honorary members, and additional guests were entertained after the ceremonies at a special luncheon. The official President's home at the east corner of the campus was opened for the affair.

The fifth sorority to nationalize on Kent's campus was Delta Gamma. They were formed from the local Sigma Sigma Sigma on December 6, 1947. After becoming the Gamma Epsilon chapter of the national group, the members held a reception in Moulton Hall.

Gamma Iota, a local colony, made its appearance on the campus during the formal rush season in the fall of 1947. It wasn't long until they pledged to Delta Zeta. National ceremonies took place on May 15, 1948 when the Gamma Kappa chapter was installed.

Alpha Omega, a local, had its beginnings as Alpha Sigma Alpha, one of the oldest of national educational fraternities on Kent's campus. In 1948, Alpha Omega was asked by the national chapter to become affiliated with Alpha Phi. They were nationalized on June 7, 1948 and became the Beta Omega chapter.

The eighth and final sorority was the Beta Gamma local which became an official Lambda Gamma chapter of Alpha Chi Omega on March 31, 1950.

Thus all the national sororities at Kent State university were formed in a period of three years, from 1947 to 1950. Since that time, no other national groups have come to our campus.

The first men's fraternity to "go national" was the oldest of the Greek organizations at Kent, Kappa Mu Kappa, founded in 1922. It became Delta Upsilon on December 4, 1948.

The second national fraternity on campus was the Gamma Tau chapter of Kappa Alpha Psi. The chapter at Kent was founded as a national in March 15, 1949.

The third fraternity established was from the local Delta Phi Sigma. They were installed as the Zeta Gamma chapter of Sigma Nu on March 19, 1949, becoming the 118th chapter of the national fraternity.

The local group Alpha Epsilon was started in 1947 and became a chapter of Alpha Epsilon Pi on April 9, 1949.

Nationalization of the Phi Kappa Delta local fraternity was stimulated mostly by a number of transfer students from other chapters of Phi Kappa Tau (mainly from Akron University and Case). Beta Mu chapter of Phi Kappa Tau fraternity received charter number 60 and were initiated on May 20, 1949.

The sixth fraternity was organized from the Friars Club, established in 1942, primarily for Catholic men. On December 4, 1949, they received a charter and became a chapter of Theta Kappa Phi. Ten years later it was amalgamated with Phi Kappa and hence has been known as Phi Kappa Theta fraternity.

The local group Gamma Tau Delta was organized in 1948. Emmitt Stopher was the advisor at the time, and he was a member of Delta Tau Delta. He sponsored the local and they were accepted as the Delta Omega chapter of Delta Tau Delta on February 25, 1950.

Phi Sigma Kappa fraternity was initiated in 1950 as the Beta Tetarton chapter. It was for-

The Kappa Sigma fraternity was affiliated on June, 1950 from the local group Kappa Sigma Chi, which was originated in 1929 as the Independents Club. In 1931 the club had taken the name of Kappa Sigma Chi to correspond with the initial letters of Kent State College.

The tenth fraternity was founded on February 13, 1953, in conjunction with the local chapter of Alpha Phi Beta. It started with a small group of 27 men to become a chapter of the Alpha Tau Omega fraternity.

Sigma Phi Epsilon originally started in 1949 as a fencing organization called the Chialpha Club. The club later changed its name to Chi Alpha and was recognized as a fraternity. The Chi Alpha fraternity became the Ohio Lambda chapter of Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity on April 25, 1953.

The Delta Tau chapter of Theta Chi fraternity was founded on May 2, 1953 from the local Phi Beta Phi. The beginning strength of the fraternity at Kent can be attributed to a group of Korean Veterans. Joining together for strength, they pledged Theta Chi.

Inspired by SAE alumni, a group of Canton extension students started a Sigma Delta local in 1949. They transferred to Kent, and petitioned the national chapter. The Ohio Lambda chapter of Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity was initiated on December 7, 1953.

The only local fraternity still in existence at Kent today is the chapter called the Collegiates. They were organized in 1954 by seven men living together in a small house.

The fifteenth fraternity at Kent was founded in 1947 as Phi Gamma Theta. The Phi Gam's were accepted into brotherhood at the Phi Delta Theta convention in September, 1954, and were initiated on December 11, 1954. They became one of over 120 undergraduate chapters throughout the United States and Canada.

Alpha Phi Alpha was founded at Kent on January 23, 1958 by a group of young men interested in upholding the aims and goals of the Negro students. They were nationalized from the local called the Sphinxmen.

The most recent fraternity to come to Kent was Phi Gamma Delta. Delta Colony was founded in January of 1959. The colony petitioned the national fraternity the following year and was installed April 23, 1960 as the 87th chapter of Phi Gamma Delta.

At Kent, the fraternities and the sororities are governed by, respectively, Inter-Fraternity council, and Panhellenic council. These councils consist of representatives of each chapter, and meet to determine general conduct and rushing rules. Another of their functions is the admission of new social fraternities and sororities on campus.

On May 25, 1961, the Cleops, local social club, were accepted as probationary members into Panhellenic council. The Cleops were organized at Kent in 1960 and hope to eventually affiliate with the national sorority, Delta Sigma Theta.
It's pretty hard for a girl to have a private conversation when your sorority sisters are around, says Gay Gruber.
In their new home, the Gamma Phi Betas love to gather in the chapter room for a little singing.

Still hoping to be recognized and accepted by IFC are the Teake Travelers. The group was founded in 1959 by transfer TKE members.

A new area of control was taken this year by IFC. Attempting to improve the fraternities scholarship and health, or at least budget, the IFC passed a recommendation that no fraternities build the traditional Homecoming display. For one reason or another most fraternities complied, and only four fraternity displays welcomed homecomers.

The future for the Greek system at Kent looks bright. Plans are already in process to erect a “fraternity row” across Morris Road from the baseball diamond, and several fraternities and sororities have hopes to build immediately when plans are completed.
The most exciting moment of Greek competition is receiving a trophy. Here the Chi Omega's admire their first place trophy for May Day Relays.
Dear Mom and Dad,

I've really got two doosies for roommates. One of them is an underwater skin-diving major and all I can see when I look around the room is swim fins, air tanks, and wet suits. The other majors in Renaissance pottery making—and her pots are strewn all over the room. They both smoke like factories, and have been for a year!!! As soon as you and daddy left, we were in full swing of Freshman Week. We were issued dinks—a kind of beanie that must be worn at all times and taken off for upperclassmen. Boy, it's the neatest way to meet sharp guys. The first day I wore my dink, this guy came up to me and said, "Dink, Frosh." It wasn't until after I dinked that he laughed and said, "I'm a freshman too."

After that I decided not to wear my dink anymore. It didn't work because even though I didn't have it on, I was still asked to dink. I can't understand what made them think I was a freshman, unless it could be my National Honor Society pin.

The first day of classes, I trudged off with all my 12 books in hand. It took me twenty minutes to get to my first class. Believe me, I felt like a pack horse going up the Swiss Alps. Later I found out I could make it in five minutes by using a neat short-cut, and I only needed one of my 12 books.

My roommates and I went to the sorority open houses. You must know what they are—girls' clubs that have houses, parties, and all those neat but expensive things. No sooner had I stepped in the door than my purse handle broke. You can imagine the chaos that followed as I feverishly tried to stuff all my cosmetics back in.

I felt something like a Miss America candidate as the members of the sorority looked me over. After staying only fifteen minutes, we trudged back to the dorm. It wasn't until I was back in my room that I realized I had on someone else's brown tweed coat instead of my blue wool!

Oh, Mom, here is a list of things I MUST have:
1. A supply of quarters so I can do my wash.
2. Some good snacks—the food is terrible.
3. I absolutely have to get a tan trench coat—I just can't wear my high school band jacket any longer.
4. Tennis shoes—these new ones will never do for college. Can't you find my old ones with the holes in them?

Other than the few things I mentioned, I really like Kent. Don't worry about me, I'll manage.

Love,
Julie

Dear Mom and Dad,

I bet you're surprised to hear from me, the son who swore he'd never write a letter. But, this letter has a purpose—SEND MONEY!

Arriving here was like finding one's self in the Gaza Strip. I no sooner got my clothes unpacked than somebody tossed a water bomb into my room. This was followed by a mad scuffle in the hall.

I came here expecting panty raids, but they have new games. I was packed into a room like a sardine. We had a contest between dormitories and ours won when we stuffed 146 men into my room.

We have a blast playing football in the lounges and using the big, round ash trays for bongo drums. I'm even getting proficient at jumping onto my top bunk after a take-off of only ten feet.

Both my six foot roommates are upperclassmen and on the football team. They're enormous guys and love to eat. We've got two dresser drawers stuffed with food for midnight snacks. If you could taste the food here, you would understand why we need snacks. UGH! My roommates keep trying to get me to go out for the freshman football team, but I'm here to get an education. If my grades turn out o.k. this quarter, I may decide to go out for basketball. We'll see!

Bob, one of my roommates, has just pledged a fraternity. As a pledge, Bob has to clean, wash, and polish the fraternity house. He also polishes shoes, washes cars, makes beds, and irons shirts.

We stayed up late the other night talking about fraternities. I think I'll join one—it sounds like the thing to do. I heard all about each one—some have all the brains, some the muscle, and one group even carries black umbrellas. Can I have some extra money if I decide to pledge?

Bob took me to an open smoker the other night. Smokers are open houses where the fraternity men rush the independents to pledge. My arm will never be the same from all the handshakes I got.

The actives are really great, and smokers are the best way I know to reload a carton of cigarettes. Belonging to a fraternity and living in the house where there is a constant round of fights and water battles, must be fun.

Got to go now, Mom. I promised some nutty girl named Julie that I'd help her with English.

Bye for now,

Mike

P.S. Don't forget the money. Twenty-five dollars should do me for a while.

“Hey, fella, I hear you’ve decided to pledge. What’s it going to be?”

“Well, I don’t know . . . guess I’ll go IFC. They seem like a really nice group of guys.”

“IfC’s not a fraternity!”

“But—well, what is it then?”

“It’s the governing body of all the fraternities on campus, and it’s made up of two representatives from each one. They hold panel discussions and deal with fraternity violations of University rules and things like that. They sent rush brochures to new students this summer, too. Didn’t you get one?”

“Yeah, but I lost it.”

“There’s your problem. I’ll get you another one. But in the meantime, don’t pledge IFC, huh?”

Dear Mom and Dad,

Just a note to invite you down for the Homecoming Day next weekend. I should be over my cold by then.

Mom, I tried to follow your suggestion about getting lots of sleep every night and dressing warmly at all times. However, I was up until 1:30 a.m. helping Bob and his fraternity brothers build their display, and it's been darned cold outdoors. Incidentally, you can have crepe paper—I don't care if I ever see another pack again!!!

Homecoming means a football game in the afternoon (we play Bowling Green), and a dance that evening. You don't mind if I bring a date to the game do you? I invited that girl from my English class to go along with us. I've also asked her to the dance.

There is an open house in the dorm after the game—guess I'll have to clean my room for a change.

See you then,
Mike

Dear Mom,

Now that five weeks of school have gone by, I'm beginning to know my way around and get settled down. I've met a couple of sorority girls and they even seem HUMAN!!

The first big event is Homecoming; and boy, did I get roped into that. For Homecoming, all sororities and fraternities build humorous displays on their front lawn to carry out a selected theme. This year, Inter-Fraternity Council, which is a group composed of representatives of each fraternity, recommended that the fraternities not build decorations because of the time, effort, and money involved. A few fraternities did build displays.

All of the groups are anxious to find people to help them with their displays. You always said, Mom, that the best way to get ahead is to volunteer. Well...I volunteered...

We went to Sally's sorority house right after dinner to work on their Homecoming display.

They had a clever idea and the only problem was building it. We hammered, sawed, nailed, and measured to get the thing constructed. After much work, we finally finished it.

For what seemed the first Homecoming week in Kent’s history, it didn’t rain, but this didn’t make up for my cold hands, stringy hair, and runny nose. I didn’t get back to the dorm and my welcome bed until 1:00 a.m.

The results of the display competition were announced the following night at the dance with gleaming trophies for the winners. For the sororities, Alpha Phi was first with their cute merry-go-round. Chi Omega’s typewriter was second and Delta Gamma’s sphinx took third place. In the fraternity division Phi Kappa Tau took the coveted first place trophy with Alpha Tau Omega second.

I went to the dance with a freshman named Mike Paine. He’s really sharp: tall, dark hair, dreamy blue eyes. A college education does have its fringe benefits. We danced to the music of Ron Metcalf and Tex Beneke. We didn’t have to be in our dorms until 2 o’clock. It was the greatest weekend I’ve had at Kent and everything that I’d imagined a “College weekend” should be.

See you at Thanksgiving,
Love,

Dear Dick,

I hear you’re thinking of coming to Kent next year. Hope you do, because you’ll really love it. Intramurals started last week, and I played on our dorm’s football team. Boy, did I get racked up! We play flag football: each player has three red flags fastened to his belt. Instead of tackling the enemy, you tear off one of his flags. Sounds safe and harmless doesn’t it. That’s what you think! We don’t wear any padding and it really gets rough. Three guys on my team got injured in our first game. But we won! I scored two touchdowns, and my roommate’s fraternity brothers are eying me with new interest. After the game, they invited me over to the fraternity house for dinner.

There are two things you gotta have to succeed in college: sports ability and an unquenchable thirst. The guys down here believe in the old saying “Eat, drink, and be merry, for tomorrow we die.” Every Friday afternoon, we go downtown for a little “TGIF” cheer. It’s a blast!

Dear Mom and Dad,

Our last day of classes is December 15, so you can pick me up at the dorm at about three o’clock. I’ll be ready!

It will be so good to get home after this quarter—believe me, I need a rest. I’ve really got to hit the books hard next week for finals. If I want to rush next quarter, I’ll have to get pretty good grades.

Dear Mom and Dad,

Bet you didn’t expect to hear from me so soon after Christmas vacation! I forgot my good brown suit. Rush week has started and I’m gonna need my suit for the dance Friday night.

During rush all the fraternities vie with each other for new pledges. We are fed and smoked to death. It all begins with open smokers at the houses, and then we get special invitations to the closed smokers.

Friday night is the last event of rush. We have to have a date for the dance, so I guess I’ll take Julie (the old standby). You know, Mom, she’s just crazy about me.

I’ve just about made up my mind to join Bob’s fraternity. The guys are really sharp—so self-assured and well-dressed. I wonder if I’ll ever be that way on my allowance.

Gotta go now. I’ll write again as soon as I’ve pledged.

Dear Dodie,

The past two weeks have been the most hectic ones of my life. Since you’re in the same boat down at Wesleyan, I know you’ll understand. It was rush week when sororities have parties to select their new members. I was wined, dined, partied, and flattered to death. I began to wonder how I’d ever make up my mind which sorority to pledge. We had open houses, coke parties, informals, and finally the best party of all, the formal party. All the girls wore cocktail dresses or formals and were very solemn as they told us of the advantages of their sorority. Well, to make a long story short—I pledged Sally’s sorority, the best group on campus (or so I think anyway).

As if rush wasn’t enough, Greek Weekend fell the weekend it all started. The Brothers Four gave a fabulous concert on Friday night in Memorial Gym. They were terrific and sang all the songs that made them famous. You know Dodie, they’re fraternity brothers!

Mike says that he used to play the guitar and sing. I sure wish he’d take it up again after seeing the Brothers Four. They were dreamy!

Top Hop Dance was the next evening and it was there that Carol Vinopal, a Delta Gamma was crowned Miss Kent State, and Chuck Denny, a member of Delta Upsilon was named Duke of Kent.

The two weeks of rush left me with a swelled head over all my wonderful charms and talents, but no “boot” in Marine Camp ever had it tougher than we the following Saturday morning at 7:45 sharp! In case you haven’t guessed it, we had house duties.

My sorority house never looked so enormous until I was actually scrubbing, sweeping, and dusting to make it shine like a bright new penny. My active sisters even went around with white gloves to make sure everything was spic and span.

Mike had it even worse with his pledge group, as they had to wash the outside of the fraternity house with a toothbrush.

Little did I know that as a pledge, I would pay dues, work, sit in long meetings on Monday nights, work, join clubs, work, and give anything and everything for my sorority. I’m beginning to wonder if it is all worth the effort.

I’m still dating Mike. He’s the greatest. Now that we are both “Greeks,” we will have lots of fun going to parties, dances, and firesides. Maybe someday we’ll even get pinned.

Dear Mom and Dad,

Thanks for the CARE package. Those cookies were really good.

I just got my bearings after rush when smack-bang along came Pork Barrel, "the show that brings out the 'ham' in everyone." Pork Barrel is an annual event sponsored by MSA and AWS. The general over-all theme for the skits was proverbs. From this category, the various groups chose their own individual title.

In the sorority division, Alpha Chi Omega took first place with "Fifty million Frenchmen can't be wrong." With a Paris scene they depicted an English couple frowning on the city because they hadn't seen many of its famous attractions. The audience's heart went out to the girls when, because of a freak accident, someone walked off with their tape recording. As a result, the Can-Can girls had to perform their dance without the aid of music.

Alpha Phi copped the second place trophy with their rendition of "We treat advisors as we treat doctors, we do as we &@*#% please as soon as their backs are turned." It featured General Custer and a good old-fashioned square dance.

The Chi Omega's, with their New York street scene, won third place honorable mention. The title of their skit was "Everything is funny as long as it happens to somebody else."

In the fraternity division, it was apparently necessary to have a dramatically patriotic and almost sickening theme performed in "black light." Ironically enough, both the first and second place

Second place went to Delta Upsilon's "Present neglect makes future regret." Phi Kappa Theta got third place honorable mention with "It's the fight that gives us pleasure, not the victory."

I had a minor part in our production. Actually, all I did was carry the props. But I felt like a real trouper trudging to the sorority house through snow and sleet and dark of night for practice.

As if that wasn't enough, next weekend we have Penny Carnival sponsored by Cardinal Key and Blue Key to raise money for scholarships. Each sorority, fraternity, and dorm has a booth where you can do everything from throwing water-filled balloons to shooting foul shots. Our pledge class is in charge of making the booth for our sorority. So far we haven't thought of an idea but I'm sure we eventually will, maybe.

Bye for now,
Julie

Dear Dick,

I got your letter last week. So you envy me being a fraternity man, do you. Well, it's like this buddy. Let me quote you a little of the things a pledge hears.

"Grab that bucket and scrub those steps, PLEDGE!"

"You lousy PLEDGE, that'll cost you fifty push-ups. 1 ... 2 ... 3 ... 4 ..."

"Get those shoes shiny or I'll give you fifty minus hours in your black book, PLEDGE!"

I'm beginning to feel like the anchor man on a chain gang.

Now that I'm a member of the group, I'm on the fraternity basketball team, the fraternity ping-pong team, the fraternity volleyball team, the fraternity bowling team ... but at the fraternity tiddley winks team, I draw the line.

The actives stranded one of my pledge brothers on a country road ten miles from campus, so we're planning to "take the house" on Sat-

Dear Dodie,

Campus Day, the best weekend at Kent is only a month away. The sororities and fraternities build floats for the parade, present a songfest during the day, and wind up with a big dance that evening.

We're already practicing our song for songfest. You should hear us!! We sound like a mob of third graders singing for the school assembly. But, we have high hopes of improving our song by Campus Day and maybe even take the first place trophy.

My big sister, Sally, showed me pictures and told me all about last year's Campus Day. The queen was Carol Vinopal, a Delta Gamma. She looked lovely in her long white gown at the coronation Saturday morning.

Delta Zeta won the songfest with "Tumbling Tumbleweeds." Alpha Phi was second, and Chi Omega took third prize. Fraternity first place trophy went to Kappa Sigma, followed by Phi Sigma Kappa, second, and Delta Tau Delta, third.

The floats were beautiful with their cleverly constructed figures of animals or people. It was a great day for manufacturers of crepe paper. Each float was stuffed, draped, and upholstered with it in a rainbow of colors.

A group of Phi Sigma Kappa's give the heave-ho to Doug Brewer as they try to throw him into the shower.
Delta Gamma’s float (roly-poly bears depicting “We’ve Barely Begun”) captured the judges’ hearts for first place. Second was Alpha Xi Delta with a lively merry-go-round depicting progress. Chi Omega took third with their rendition of “Just Build a Better Mousetrap.”

Phi Kappa Theta was first in the fraternity division with a pink, white, and blue rendition of rockets and planes. Phi Kappa Tau’s “Flintstones” were second and Delta Tau Delta’s skunk took third.

Since a big crowd was expected for the dance, two were planned—one in Memorial Gym with Sammy Kaye providing the music and the other in Wills Gym with Billy May’s band.

To get back to this year we’ve begun our float. We’re building it out in a cold, damp, hay-filled barn about a mile from campus. So far we haven’t made much progress, but I’m sure we’ll get it done the last night before the big day. We’ve built the basic structure of 2 x 4’s and chicken wire. Now we are working on the paper mache figures and crepe paper stuffing.

I bet you’re going through the same thing at Wesleyan. See you in a month.

Sincerely,

Julie

Dear Dick,

Like I said before to you, Greek life and fraternity pledging is really bad. We just had Hell Week and yesterday I was initiated as an active member.

During Hell Week we had to stay at the fraternity house. We brought our clothes, blankets, and pillows and slept on the basement floor. We were harassed every night until two o’clock and could hardly make it to classes the following day.

The whole week, we were required to carry gum, cigarettes, and candy for any active member who wanted some. To fool them, I chose to carry Black Jack, Wild Cherry, and Licorice. Hardly anyone wanted gum from me.

The last night before initiation was the worst of all. We stayed up all night, and as a part of our ordeal we all got into a closet and smoked cheap cigars. Also, a thousand push-ups and alum water doesn’t make the night any easier. And I wouldn’t recommend raw eggs to a dog, let alone a pledge.

Now I know why they smiled when they told the rushees about studying at the library during help week.

After it was all over, I didn’t think it was so bad. Believe me, I’m going to get my revenge with the next pledge class.

I’ll see you next month. We’ll have to get together before I go up to the Lake.

See ya’

Dear Mom and Dad,

Spring quarter will be over in a few weeks, but we still have a few more social events. I'm keeping my fingers crossed that the weather will be nice for Rowboat Regatta, Kent's soggy answer to the Olympic Games.

Last year, the weather was cold and damp and rainy as Queen Pearlmarie Yount reigned over the festivities. This year I have been recruited to row for our sorority in the regatta. I don't know whether to regard it as a compliment or not.

Oh, Mom, I almost forgot to tell you the most exciting thing of all—Mike finally asked me to wear his fraternity pin. I've been waiting for this ever since he got it! We were serenaded by my sorority and his fraternity before the blazing Greek letters. I was given a bouquet of red roses and a kiss from every member of the fraternity—I'm beginning to wonder if I picked the right boy!

Now that summer is almost here I think back on my freshman year at Kent. I used to wonder if Greek life was all it is cracked up to be—all those house duties and float committees. But when I see my sorority bring home a big gold trophy for the mantle or am serenaded by my pin-mate's fraternity, I know that I am very happy and proud to be a Greek.

Love,
Julie

Hell Week—I won’t go into a long description. IT IS JUST WHAT THE NAME IMPLIES. Anyway, now that I’m an active member of the fraternity, I feel like I’ve arrived.

I’ve got to tell you some bad news. You know those sharp slacks you gave me for Christmas? Well, I was the first man on our tug-of-war team for Rowboat Regatta and I got pulled into the creek. The pants got soaked but we won the tug!

On Campus Day as a new active, I was drafted to sit under our float and work the CO₂ tank to give our paper mache locomotive its realistic smoke. I sat under our chicken wire and crepe paper cocoon for five hours without food, cigarettes, or liquid refreshment. I survived the ordeal very well and even held up for songfest in the afternoon.

Since you’re coming down this weekend, you’d better bring along my guitar. Ever since she saw the Brothers Four during Greek Weekend, my pinmate Julie has been nagging me about taking up the guitar again. Oh, I forgot to tell you, Julie and I got pinned at our Spring Formal held at Silver Lake Country Club last week.

This quarter we’re stressing scholarship in the fraternity (at least during the last few weeks of school). I’ve already started to bone up for my finals. That’s good—for me.

All kidding aside, Mom, this has been a swell year. Being in a fraternity really gives you a sense of belonging. It gives you the chance to make friends with guys of similar interests. We call ourselves fraternity brothers and by the end of the year, we are really that—BROTHERS.

Julie feels the same way about her sorority sisters.

Fraternities and sororities—what would college life be without them?

Dear Michael,

Here I am at Camp Happiness with all the little demons ranging in age from eight to twelve. Believe me, I can see why their parents want to get rid of them for a month in the summer. It's pure TORTURE!!

They all seem to love me and here are a few of their words.

"Julie, I wish you were my real sister."

"Aren't we having a grand time here as Scouts at Camp Happiness?"

To make a long story short, being here is like regressing to elementary school.

It seems like a year since we left school but really it has only been three weeks. I miss you already and I can hardly wait to get back to school in the fall. I'll be moving into the sorority house and you'll be at the fraternity house. Guess we'll be able to talk on the telephone now after 11 o'clock.

I bet you're having a ball up there at Lake Placid. If only you didn't have to wash dishes all day, you'd really be "doing the town." When I see you, you'll have dishpan hands, but I won't mind. I'm still wearing your pin, of course. Boy, did the kids razz me about that.

I hope we will be able to see each other this summer, but if not, at least we'll keep in touch. WON'T WE! !

Journalism major Josephine Werne was editor of the Daily Kent Stater in the spring quarter, 1961. President of professional honorary Theta Sigma Phi, Jo was awarded a scholarship to study a year in Latin America.
Jeana Savu, a French major, is president of Cardinal Key. She has held office in her dormitory, class, several honoraries and other organizations to which she belongs. Jeana is also listed in 'Who's Who.'

Harvey Hunt, a music major, is star center on the Golden Flash basketball team. He has also played football two years. He is vice president of Alpha Phi Alpha and a member of Varsity K.

The four years pass quickly for most. They strengthen the envisioned goals of some and reveal broader fields of potential for many others. It’s a period of growth and development for students, sometimes abrupt and harsh, usually measured and gentle.

But looking aside from the changes tangible and intangible wrought in all students, the campus, too, grows and matures. Slowly it encompasses the surrounding farms acre by acre, always retaining the basic features which make it Alma Mater and a familiar place to all home-comers. 1962 graduates have seen the coming of many buildings and changes in policies and procedures around Kent State. Four years ago a large old house stood on the hill now commanded by the Speech and Music Center. Two years ago Prentice, Dunbar, Lake and Olson were names solely of people important to KSU’s development. Now they are also great structures whose names appear on dormitory preference lists. In the Fall of 1958 the New Student Program took about an hour, today it consists of a pre-college conference plus a two-day indoctrination period. Many, many other changes could be listed.

The four years have seen the usual campus shake-ups, flares of emotions, displays of unity and disunity typical of any college scene. The seniors of 1962 take these memories with them and go to a world waiting for fresh talent, leaving behind them the never-ending stream of next year’s seniors.

Bob Birney, a journalism major, is a member of Phi Gamma Delta social fraternity, president of both Blue Key and Inter-Fraternity Council, and a member of Sigma Delta Chi honorary and Student Council.

Nancy DePodesta, an art major, is a member of Alpha Phi social sorority, Student Council, and president of Pan-Hellenic Council. She has held office an Off-Campus Council, AWS, and many sorority committees.

The last snow of winter will probably also be the last long cold walk to class for these seniors.
University Police

A police force composed of 15 duly authorized officers, including a chief and two sergeants, plus a security officer and his assistant, provides protection around the clock to Kent State university students. The University police, working in three shifts, are responsible for the safety of banking KSU funds, patrolling women's dorms, checking traffic violations and other functions involving protection for the university. The addition of a new police radio-equipped station wagon this year has insured increased operating efficiency of the force.

The evening shift includes standing, Burt Veon, Bob Crapo, Calvin Cliff, Allen Boston, and Sergeant Clem Rine, seated.

Rudolph Karst, Martin Tinker, and Don Styles work the night shift from 12:00 to 8:00 am.

To the casual reader a yearbook is often simply an "album" of pictures with accompanying identifications and enough written text to fill up the remaining holes on the pages. Merely ink on paper . . . though nice to own and enjoy.

But to the staff and the adviser the yearbook means much more. For yearbook work comprises a multitude of details: Layout, Art, Photography, Copy, Typography, Covers and Binding (not to mention the small detail of money-raising). Highly technical and often confusing, these details are at the very least time-consuming and a source of anxiety to a staff unless the publisher's representative is company-trained to give needed help and suggestions.

All representatives for Wm. J. Keller Inc. are skilled in the many facets of yearbook work, having at their finger-tips the answers to yearbook problems as well as a multitude of ideas for new graphic arts special effects, to enable the staff to produce a yearbook that is different and attractive. Your Keller salesman is more than a technical adviser, he is a "clearing-house" of yearbook ideas.
